¶96.14 RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENT
AUTHORITIES

Mr. ARCHER, pursuant to House Resolution 553, called up the bill (H.R. 2621) to extend trade authorities procedures with respect to reciprocal trade agreements, and for other purposes.

When said bill was considered and read twice.

Pursuant to House Resolution 553, the amendment recommended by the Committee on Ways and Means, as modified by the following amendment printed in House Report 105-745, was considered as adopted:

Amend section 101 to read as follows:

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE AND FINDINGS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—The Act may be cited as the “Reciprocal Trade Agreement Authorities Act of 1998”.

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The expansion of international trade is vital to the national security of the United States. Trade is critical to the economic growth and strength of the United States and to its leadership in the world. Stable trading relationships promote security and prosperity. Trade agreements today serve the same purposes that security pacts played during the Cold War, binding nations together through a series of mutual rights and obligations. Leadership by the United States in international trade fosters open markets, democracy, and peace throughout the world.

(2) The national security of the United States depends on its economic security, which in turn is founded upon a vibrant and growing industrial base. Trade expansion has been the engine of economic growth. Trade agreements maximize opportunities for the critical sectors and building blocks of the economy of the United States, such as information technology, telecommunications and other leading technologies, basic industries, capital equipment, medical equipment, services, agriculture, environmental technology, and intellectual property. Trade will create new opportunities for the United States and preserve the unparalleled strength of the United States in economic, political, and military affairs. The United States, secured by expanding trade and economic opportunities, will meet the challenges of the twenty-first century.
